IDENTIFIERS Program Characteristics

ABSTRACT

Noting that the wealth of parenting curricula available poses a challenge to identifying the more appropriate curricula for a particular group, this guide is designed to enable more effective and efficient selection of curricula for parent education. The guide describes and evaluates 41 parenting programs and is divided into two major sections. The Quick Reference section provides a tabular delineation of parenting curricula and provides information regarding content, program format, media format, ratings of usefulness for general parent and professional use, and program length. The Narratives for Parenting Curricula section provides specific information on the curricula, including an abstract of its content, the cost, and ordering information. The basic requirements for programs selected were that they be congruent with existing human development principles and practices and that they not sanction psychological or physical abuse. Additional principles considered fundamental for included programs were that the programs appreciated diversity in family structure and function, ethnicity, and social class. Also included in the guide is a discussion of how to select a parenting program. (KB)

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

ParentLink is pleased to provide the public with this valuable guide to parenting curricula. By enabling people to more effectively and efficiently select parenting curricula, it is our hope that more parents will receive quality parenting information and support.

This guide has been made possible thanks to the dedication and commitment of many concerned Missourians:

The ParentLink Coalition initiated and provided guidance to the development of this manual. Throughout the review process their input has been extremely helpful. Their names and affiliations are listed on pages 4 and 5.

The ParentLink Curriculum Committee was critical to the accomplishment of this review process. Dr. Mary McPhail Gray, past Human Development Specialist for Missouri's University Extension, and Nell Bishop, past president for the Missouri Federation of Parents, provided leadership to this committee. Committee members were drawn from multiple areas of expertise. They represented a variety of interests and ideas. Over the past two years their commitment to providing information to parents and professionals about parenting curriculum has kept them steadfast in their efforts. Their names and brief biographies are provided on pages 1-3. They are thanked for their outstanding contribution of time, energy, and expertise.

Many deserve credit for organizing the review process, compiling the evaluative summaries, and writing this manual:

Dr. Mary McPhail Gray supervised students and staff in accomplishing many of these tasks. She dedicated extensive amounts of time in writing text for this manual.

Robin R. Wingo, M.S.W, L.C.S.W., ParentLink Connection Center Coordinator, was instrumental at each stage of the manual's development. She helped to review curriculum, wrote text, supervised her staff in securing materials for review, and orchestrated the refinement and production of this guide. Her perseverance and diligence is appreciated.

Dr. Barbara Froke, Associate Dean for Human Environmental Sciences, University Extension, helped the curriculum committee jump the last few hurdles by investigating editorial, graphic artwork, and printing alternatives.

Terrie Underwood, past Human Development and Family Studies research assistant; Lori Moore and Kara Nolan, both masters-level Social Work interns, are recognized for providing support and assistance in executing many specialized tasks. Without the aide of their communication and organizational skills, we would not have received, reviewed, and completed this guide.

In addition, Susan Holladay Fisher, University Extension Human Development Specialist, is thanked for her critical review of materials and her assistance in editing. Sharon Wood-Turley, professional editor, and Jeanne Bintzer, University Extension graphic artist, are also appreciated for their cooperation, skills, and contributions. Bev Morrow and Patty Hudnut have contributed hours to typing revisions and deserve recognition as well.

By these credits, one can easily recognize the amount of human resources that were used to complete this project, and I believe this is reflected in the manual's quality and usefulness. ParentLink proudly presents this manual to the public.

MEMBERS OF CURRICULA REVIEW PANEL 1990-1992

Nell Bishop, Co-Chair, past president of Missouri Federation of Parents for a Drug Free Youth. Nell has long been active as a community organizer and volunteer in the St. Louis area. She was instrumental in the promotion of the "Red Ribbon Week" campaign in Missouri and is a past member of the regional advisory council of the Division of Alcohol and Drug Abuse. She has been a materials reviewer for the Department of Elementary and Secondary Education and has reviewed post-secondary programs for the National Office of Substance Abuse Prevention. She is familiar with many curricula published in support of parents.

Charles Durham, AT&T Employee Assistance Program, St. Louis. Charlie has a longtime interest in substance abuse prevention and effective parenting programs. He was founding member of the Pennsylvania State Federation of Parents for a Drug Free Youth.

Sue G. Fisher, M.S., past director of Prevention Services, Progressive Youth Center, St. Louis. As a health educator, Sue has developed and implemented a variety of programs and materials for youth, parents, and professionals. Her areas of expertise include adolescent development, curriculum development, and prevention in at-risk populations. She coordinated the development and piloted the implementation of MOSAP a statewide student assistance program for substance abuse prevention.

Mary McPhail Gray, Ph.D., Co-Chair, State Extension Human Development Specialist with Human Environmental Sciences. Mary has worked with parents in a variety of clinical and educational settings. She has completed and published research in parenting and child development. Special interests include high-risk families and children, community development and intervention, and family-community interfaces.

Mable Grimes, Ph.D., State Extension Specialist in 4-H and Youth Development on the Columbia campus. Mabel is a twenty-five year veteran with University Extension and has been involved in programming for high-risk youth and low-income audiences for many years. In particular, she has been concerned with adolescent pregnancy and parenthood and minority health. Mabel is state fellow in the Missouri Youth Initiative, a project funded by the W. K. Kellogg Foundation.

Tamara Kasser, M.S., Urban Youth Specialist in 4-H Youth Development Programs. Tamara serves University Extension as a Regional Specialist in the St. Louis area. Committed to intervention programs reinforcing self-esteem and parenting skills, Tamara has developed broad programs for schools and agencies in the area of substance abuse prevention.

Carol Klass, Ph.D., Director of Early Intervention Programming, Cardinal Glennon Children's Hospital, St. Louis. Carol is a longtime advocate for parents and young families. Formerly the director of a mentoring project in Illinois for high-risk parents, she developed a curriculum and training model for assisting parents at risk of abusing their children. In addition, she has been active in promoting coordinated efforts between early childhood professionals and public school personnel in the transition from day care to public school attendance. Her research includes ethnographic studies of day care, early intervention for young children at risk, and family support programming.

Lois Laster, M.S., Foods and Nutrition Regional Extension Specialist within Human Environmental Sciences. Lois is an experienced Extension professional who has supervised the Expanded Food and Nutrition Program in the inner-city area of St. Louis. She has worked with low-income families for many years and helped paraprofessionals develop appropriate materials for minority and low-income audiences.

Carol Mertensmeyer, Ph.D., Program Director of Missouri's ParentLink project. Carol recently completed her Ph.D. in Human Development and Family Studies and is a fellow in the Missouri Youth Initiative, a community based project funded by the W. K. Kellogg Foundation. She has developed an innovative project in support of parents that encourages interagency networking in new and creative ways. Carol has been a home economics teacher at the secondary level and an advocate for handicapped children and their families. Her research interests include low-resource families, parent education, and public policy.

Don Miller, M.S., Regional Extension Specialist in Human Development. Don has served as a regional substance abuse coordinator. He has been an active parent educator for many years and was formerly the director of a day care center that served infants, preschool children, and school-age children in Wyoming. Don has been involved in a number of education programs for substance abuse prevention and families in transition through rural crisis in Missouri.

Basil Hunt, M.S., Retired Superintendent of Public Schools in Normandy, Missouri. Basil has been a longtime activist for families and parents. He has been instrumental in helping communities organize parent fairs and other activities to raise awareness and create appropriate programs in support of parents in the community. He is the past president of the Missouri Division of Alcohol and Drug Abuse Advisory Council.

Terrie Underwood, M.S., Graduate Research Assistant for Parenting Curriculum Committee. Terrie is a former day care center director and has worked in the field of parent education for a number of years. She has worked in the Department of the Army in crisis intervention with families experiencing loss in the military community. Her masters internship work was with an agency serving clients in treatment for chemical dependency accompanied by their children.

Elizabeth Vemer, Ph.D., former State Extension Specialist in Human Development within Human Environmental Sciences on the Columbia campus. Elizabeth held a joint appointment at the University of Missouri-Columbia and Lincoln University and worked with communities to develop innovative programs in support of youth at risk. Because of her expertise in human sexuality and adolescent parenting, she was asked to help review materials that dealt with these special focus parenting topics. Her death in June of 1991 deeply saddened us all.

Robin R. Wingo, M.S.W., L.C.S.W., ParentLink Connection Center Coordinator. Robin is a professional with many years of experience working directly with families in clinical environments and in staff training for professionals working with families. She has worked in residential treatment with youth and in family therapy through the Division of Youth Services. Most recently, she has been a medical social worker at the University of Missouri Hospitals and Clinics and has worked with families and parents in crisis. Robin has been a consultant with the Department of Mental Health, Division of Alcohol and Drug Abuse and is on the Missouri Children's Trust Fund Advisory Board.

OVERVIEW

The Guide for Choosing Parenting Curricula I is designed to help parenting educators, community leaders, community coalitions, organizations, and parents select appropriate parenting curricula. It describes and evaluates a variety of parenting programs that are summarized in the Quick Reference, pages 13-15, and more fully explained in the Narratives for Parenting Curricula, pages 17-67.

In the Quick Reference, each program is listed alphabetically by title. Program criteria are listed across the top of the page and below each criterion is relevant program information. After studying the Quick Reference, turn to Narratives for Parenting Curricula. This section provides specific information including an abstract of the content, the cost, and ordering information.

On pages 68-71 there is a brief guide about how to select parenting programs. The combination of the grid, the narrative, and the guide should help you make effective choices regarding parenting curricula.

On page 72 you will find a form asking for suggestions on parenting programs to review for the next edition. Your recommendations will be appreciated.

QUICK REFERENCE

for parenting curricula

DEFINITION OF TERMS

Each of the following terms is located, in abbreviated form, at the top left corner of the QUICK REFERENCE pages for easy recall.

Curriculum Categories

The target group for materials represents the audience for which the materials are appropriate. One curriculum may fit more than one target group. These are divided into the following:

GP - General Parenting

These materials provide a variety of skills to enhance general parenting among people in a variety of life circumstances. Frequently, materials stress healthy communication, and acknowledge the developmental stages of parents and children. Findings from the family strengths literature about the characteristics of healthy or strong families are often emphasized. The curriculum can be adapted for a variety of audiences and are frequently used in programs to reinforce the value of parent education.

A/S - Parenting Different Ages and Stages

These parenting materials have been written with a specific age and/or stage of the child or the parent in mind. Examples are materials written for adolescent parents, or materials written for the parents of preschool children. These materials should not be used with parent groups representing a variety of life stages and ages of children.

SF - Special Focus Parenting

These materials cover a broad category that support parents faced with a specific issue in human development. For example understanding substance abuse prevention, transitions through divorce or parenting special needs children. These materials are not appropriate for a general audience, but they are often of high interest and include materials that cause strong responses from parents. Frequently, community members find that a concern about a specific social problem has initiated the interest in parent education. The materials in this Special Focus category are therefore often the beginning point for a more comprehensive offering of parenting programs.

Program Format of Materials

The format categories defined below will help you decide how to effectively use the parenting materials.

LR - Leader Required to Process

A professional parent educator/family life educator or other knowledgeable professional is needed to adequately present the materials. Frequently these materials help parents practice specific skills or offer in-depth information about developmental stages and parental responses to specialized topics such as dealing with death, divorce or human sexuality.

LE - Leader Could Enhance Process

These materials are most effective when presented in a group setting by a skilled leader. While the curriculum can stand alone, the educational process is enhanced by group discussions.

SS - Self-Study

Materials are rated as appropriate for self-study if the information is clear and presented in a supportive, positive manner that enhances individual study.

Media Format of Materials

Under this criterion, all pieces and types of media that accompany the parent education program are listed.

V - Video

This refers to a half-inch video format (VHS).

B - Book

We have included books in this curriculum review only when they have repeatedly been recommended by a variety of parent educators or professionals. We made no attempt to comprehensively review parenting books.

TM - Teacher's Manual

This refers to a manual that was developed by the author of the curriculum materials and sometimes includes promotional components.

PM - Parent Manual

In most cases, the parent manuals are designed for individual parents to use as they work individually or in a group setting. Frequently there is a small cost associated with ordering individual manuals for parent participants.

S/F- Slide-Film

There are not many slides or film strips in the curriculum reviewed. We included those materials when there was a strong feeling that the materials were of high quality and were not available in another format.

AC - Audio Cassette

In some cases, the audio cassettes are part of a larger program accompanied by video tapes or books. In other cases, the audio cassettes alone carry the parenting program.

WB - Workbook

Generally, the workbook materials are planned for a class format, or in some cases for individual families or small groups to do together.

Numerical Ratings

NA - Not Applicable

This was used to designate when a criterion was not applicable for the particular materials. For example, materials developed for leader directed group process are generally not applicable for self-study.

Numerical Score

The rating scale used is from one to ten with ten as the highest rating.

Quality for Self-Study

Under this criterion, materials were judged for their usefulness as self-study tools. The review panel rated materials on a scale of one to ten with ten being the highest rating. In some cases, materials received high ratings both as self-study programs and as resources to be used in group settings with skilled leaders.

Quality for Professional Use

Quality for professional use was also rated on a scale of one to ten. (Ten is the highest rating.) This criterion evaluated the strength of the curriculum as a teaching tool for a family life educator, parent educator, or other professional. Where a program was rated particularly low, the consensus was that the material would not be particularly helpful.

Length of the Program

In all cases the time commitment was either time reported by the program authors or else it represented the length of time required to view a video program or listen to an audio program. When the programs are planned for a series of meetings, an indication is made of both the number of programs or number of weeks one might give the program and the number of hours per program.

FUNDAMENTAL PRINCIPLES OF CONTENT

Through lengthy discussion and multiple reviews, we concluded that five fundamental principles will be viewed as basic requirements for all exemplary programs. Principles 1 and 2 below were requirements, a minimal standard for parenting materials. Principles 3, 4, and 5 were perhaps less fundamental, but only in a relative sense. For a particular intended audience, they may in fact be primary. We felt it was important to the education and advocacy for all children and parents, that all five quality indicators be present as often as possible.

1. Congruent with existing human development principles and practices. The panel always made an evaluation of the content of the materials to ascertain that it reflects both research and practice in the area of parent support and education. There were very few materials reviewed that did not meet this criterion.
2. Sanctions psychological or physical abuse. Obviously the panel wanted parent education materials to be marked "no" for this criterion. Few materials needed to be marked "yes." Where materials were marked "yes," we concluded that the omission of necessary information, or portrayal of autocratic parenting practices with limited respect for child input created the potential for psychological abuse.
3. Appreciates diversity in family structure and functions. This criterion was marked "yes" if single-parent families, three-generational families, blended families, etc. were acceptably and openly included in the portrayal of families.
4. Appreciates diversity in ethnicity. The review panel felt strongly that this should not simply mean the inclusion of people of minority ethnic cultures in the program, but that the richness of cultural diversity and the variety of traditions and values that such diversity represents was respected and reflected in a positive light.
5. Appreciates diversity in social class. The panel felt it was important to portray the realities of families with a variety of incomes and family resources. Materials are rated positively on this criterion if the practices and values of different social classes are presented in a way that promotes tolerance and respect, and if materials contain realistic suggestions for problem solving.

Cost

Cost figures are always changing. People interested in ordering materials should check directly with the publishing sources. Costs in this book were obtained in April 1992.

Date of Publication

Most materials reviewed were published within the last decade. Older materials included in the reviews are materials excellent in quality, and widely used. They have stood the test of practice and are recommended by a variety of professionals.

Summary of Criterion Process

This guide is the result of a two-year process of developing standards for evaluation and then using those standards to judge the parent education materials listed here.

Subcommittees evaluated materials that had been categorized by target audience (all parents, parents at specific ages/stages, and parents with special needs). Each subcommittee dealt specifically with one target group. A numerical ranking was assigned to each curriculum for use by parents or professionals. Numerical scores are meant to indicate thoughtful, professional judgments about the quality of the materials and do not imply an outright recommendation or endorsement of specific parenting programs. In all cases, ratings are a mean of the scores given by subcommittee members.

After completing this extensive review process, the members of the Curriculum Review Panel believe that there are a number of high quality parenting materials available; however, there are also poor quality materials or materials inappropriate for a particular audience. The five fundamental criterion we selected creates a minimum standard against which materials can be evaluated in order to meet the needs of all parents and professionals.

Additionally, while we understand the constraints of budget, we believe that cost should be only one criterion used to evaluate materials. A particular audience may be best served by a curriculum that is beyond the initially planned budget for an organization or parenting event. When this is true, the users of this book may wish to think seriously about obtaining additional funds in order to have more appropriate materials. On the other hand, the cost factor alone should not be seen as indicating quality. Materials developed with the financial support of various agencies or private enterprise may be less expensive than those being marketed by private publishing companies needing to maintain a profit. It is important for the user to view materials and ask a number of questions about the quality and the content of the material as appropriate for their audience before they let themselves be influenced by price alone.

NARRATIVES

for parenting curricula

Included in the narratives is information that can guide a user to more specific selection of programs. All programs are listed alphabetically in the narrative section following the same order as they appear in the grid. The first entry in the narrative is a brief abstract of the content and objectives of the program. The section entitled program format gives a more indepth listing of the kind of materials and the probable conditions under which they might appropriately be used. Included in this section is information about the content covered in the program. The rating for general parent use and professional use is self-explanatory and taken directly from the grid. The program package lists all items which come in the set of materials by that title. Ordering information has been confirmed as of April, 1992. If users find errors in this information, we greatly appreciate hearing from you.

The final entry in the narrative section is entitled Reviewer's Notes. These notes were written by the persons responsible for reviewing and contain an overall sense of the program or special instructions for your consideration as you make a program selection. In cases where it was felt that a program was uniquely appropriate for one audience, but would not be appropriate for general use, the reasons for this rating were elaborated in the reviewers' notes.

In all cases, information is held in our review files that is more extensive than has been included in this document. If you need further explanations or would like to informally discuss your potential use of any of the curriculum listed, please call the ParentLink Connection Center staff at 1-800-552-8522.

A CHILD IN YOUR LIFE developed by Purdue University

This series of five videos shows parents of all ages how to deal with parental stress. Parents will learn how to develop support systems. The videos show parents' behaviors typical of young children and help parents develop reasonable expectations, and positive discipline techniques.

Program Format: Video tapes accompanied by parent booklet. Videos:

- I. Come Play With Me
- II. Help Me Make It Through The Day
- III. Why Won't You Behave
- IV. My, How You've Grown
- V. With A Little Help From My Friends
- VI. Time to Eat (See Reviewer's Note)

Target Group: Originally developed for teen parents, but also appropriate for new parents and low-income parents of any age.

Reviewer's Note: Rare set - highly recommend. Good to use with low-income families. "Time to Eat" tape from this series has some inaccurate information according to nutrition and human development specialists. We do not recommend its use.

ACTIVE PARENTING by Michael Popkin

Active Parenting, based on the work of Alfred Adler and Rudolf Dreikurs, brings parents together for discussions based on the issues raised in the program's videos and homework assignments. Focus of program is communication, building self-esteem, decision-making, and family strengths.

Program Format: Groups of 10-20 parents meet 1-1/2 to 2 hours weekly, for six weeks. Participation in all sessions is recommended. Topics covered:

- I. The Active Parent
- II. Understanding Your Child
- III. Instilling Courage
- IV. Developing Responsibility
- V. Winning Cooperation
- VI. The Cooperative Family in Action

Target Group: Middle/Upper Middle Class Professional Families

ACTIVE PARENTING OF TEENS by Michael H. Popkin

Active Parenting of Teens is a continuation of theory and skills found in the original Active Parenting Program. Discussion groups are implemented through the use of teen-specific videos, narrated by actor Dick Van Patten. Issues specifically addressed include drugs, peer pressures, and teen sexuality.

Program Format: Best facilitated by a trained group leader. Small groups, consisting of 10-20 parents, meet for 1-1/2 to 2 hours for six weeks. Topics covered:

- I. The Active Parent
- II. Instilling Courage and Self-Esteem
- III. Developing Responsibility Through Discipline
- IV. Winning Cooperation Through Communication
- V. The Challenge of Alcohol and Other Drugs
- VI. Parenting and Teen Sexuality

Target Group: Middle/Upper Middle Class Professional Parents

Cost: $295.00

Reviewer's Note: Because of the reading level of this material, a high school degree is needed. The parent materials require a high amount of self-directed learning. The sections on leadership skills and handling of difficult situations are inadequate for lay persons, thus requiring a skilled facilitator. Issues dealing with parent-child interactions are presented with flip overacting and disregard for the seriousness of the issue. Promotional materials are not developmentally appropriate, and present the teen in a condescending light.

BOYS TOWN - VIDEOS FOR PARENTS developed by Kiedel Enterprises

The series covers topics from self-esteem and peer pressure to making sure teens and preteens do their homework and help around the house. The tapes use dramatic, true-to-life vignettes to illustrate key parenting issues. A booklet accompanies each video.

Program Format: Each video tape is 10-16 minutes long, accompanied by an information booklet. The series of eleven videos are:

- I. A Change For The Better! Teaching Correct Behavior - helps parents deal with frustration regarding the behaviors of children and teens. Besides stopping children from acting the "wrong" way, this video shows parents how to teach kids a more appropriate behavior. (11 minutes)
- II. I Can't Decide! What Should I Do? - offers a method for helping youngsters think through problems and explore solutions. The process is simple and gives children and teens a way of thinking about big and little decisions that will help them into adulthood. (15 minutes)
- III. Catch 'Em Being Good! Happier Kids, Happier Parents Through Effective Praise - shows parents how to concentrate on the good things their children are doing and make everyone happier in the process. By following the natural inclination to point out children's mistakes, many parents miss opportunities to improve their children's behavior and their mutual relationship. (10 minutes)
- IV. Homework? I'll Do It Later! - is for parents whose child or teen seems to have time for everything but homework. Specific examples of how to deal with excuses, provide structure, communicate with the school and with the family. (16 minutes)
- V. You Want Me To Help With Housework? No Way - presents a means to teach children to contribute by helping around the house. Parents will learn how having children share in household responsibilities builds self-esteem and gives today's busy parents more time to enjoy their family. (14 minutes)
- VI. Setting Your Child Up For Success! Anticipating And Preventing Problems - shows parents how to help their children be more successful in daily situations. Parents will learn how to teach children to plan ahead. (12 minutes)

- VII. It's Great To Be Me! Increasing Your Child's Self-Esteem - suggests practical ways parents can boost their child's developing self-esteem. A healthy sense of self-esteem can help a youth stay out of trouble, be a better student and be more creative. Parents will learn how a child's self-esteem can be enhanced. (12 minutes)
- VIII. I'm Not Everybody! Helping Your Child Stand Up To Peer Pressure - tackles a problem that concerns many parents - how to make sure their children will make responsible decisions in high pressure situations with friends. Parents will learn steps they can take to prepare their children to deal with peer pressure. (12 minutes)
- IX. No, I Won't And You Can't Make Me! - offers a method for handling children and teen defiance and temper flare-ups. Based on the principles used at BOYS TOWN, this video shows parents how to improve their relationship with their child, control their own anger, and help an angry youngster calm down. (13 minutes)
- X. Take Time To Be A Family! Holding Successful Family Meetings - demonstrates how a weekly meeting can improve communication and planning within the family. It explains how to use these meetings to build your children's decision-making skills and enhance their level of responsibility. (10 minutes)
- XI. Negotiating Within The Family! You And Your Child Can Both Get What You Want - parents learn to use a written contract to help their children learn to set achievable goals. Research-based discussion of goals and successful achievement. (14 minutes)

Target Group: Parents, educators, and counselors of adolescents.

DEVELOPING CAPABLE PEOPLE by Stephen Glenn

This series consists of five video tapes, one hour each, that are companion pieces to Stephen Glenn's book Raising Self-Reliant Children in a Self-Indulgent World. Each tape may be purchased individually or as a set.

Program Format: The five video tapes are for use in a leader guided workshop setting. The five videos included are:

- I. Introduction To Developing Capable People - examines the many societal changes that affect the way young people learn life skills. Alternatives are examined and considered.
- II. What They See Is What You've Got: Five Keys To Working With Perception - learning to develop and/or improve the ability to work with the perceptions that set the stage for attitude, motivation, and behavior is the focus of this video.
- III. Empowering Others: Ten Keys To Affirming And Validating People - looks at behaviors that build a family's self-esteem, confidence, trust and closeness. Also looks at behaviors that detract from these building blocks of a healthy family.
- IV. The Greatest Human Need - video provides an opportunity to explore the process of finding the meaning of life and one's place in it. How others can influence that by their affirmation skills is discussed.
- V. Six Steps To Developing Responsibility - utilizing a functional model for teaching responsible behavior, this video discusses establishing consequences in the home.

Reviewer's Note: The organization of each video is not clear or well developed. Because of the format, the videos must be leader presented. The content contains excellent information and principles, but innumerable asides and personal vignettes lead to key information getting lost. Sixty minutes of constant monologue is too long. Content of each would be better utilized in a 20-minute tape. Basic content is present in concise form in the companion book Raising Self-Reliant Children in a Self-Indulgent World.

EARLY CHILDHOOD STEP (Systematic Training For Effective Parenting) by Don Dinkmeyer, Gary D. McKay, & James S. Dinkmeyer

Early Childhood STEP (Systematic Training for Effective Parenting) is a program for parents of young children. The program shows parents how to use the principles and techniques in STEP with babies, toddlers, and preschoolers.

Program Format: The workshop format typically lasts 1-1/2 to 2 hours for seven sessions. Reading from the book Parenting Young Children, and video presentations are the catalysts for group discussions and skill building. The program's seven sessions are:

- I. Understanding Young Children
- II. Understanding Young Children's Behavior
- III. Building Self-Esteem in the Early Years
- IV. Communicating With Young Children
- V. Helping Young Children Learn to Cooperate
- VI. Effective Discipline
- VII. Nurturing Emotional and Social Development: Crying, Tantrums, Fears, Toilet Training, Honesty, and More.

Reviewer's Note: Excellent program to help parents with young children develop a basic understanding of parenting. By adopting the use of these principles, parents help increase the self-esteem of their children, as well as themselves, throughout life. The video content is clear and excellent. Volunteer leaders can be used, as stated by the training manual, but it would be more appropriate if those involved as leaders had some background with the topic.

EFFECTIVE BLACK PARENTING by Kerby Alvy

Using a positive, ethnically sensitive approach, the program provides an opportunity for black parents to learn and relearn parenting skills. The program promotes informal discussions among family members as a way to process major family issues. Topics include raising children in single-parent families and preventing childhood drug use and abuse. Child abuse in relation to ethnic issues is also discussed. It is important to note the program is written for African-American audiences, and ethnic heritage is stressed throughout.

Program Format: During the 15-week program (one 3-hour session per week), parents are guided by a skilled leader through the following topics:

- I. The Pyramid of Success for Black Children
- II. Modern Black Self-Discipline
- III. The Thinking Parent's Approach
- IV. Family Rule Guidelines

Reviewers' Note: Overall a strong program. The recommended readings are important to fully appreciate the parenting program. Some statistics may be dated. Portions of program would be valuable for other parenting groups. Positive and encouraging in tone. Would recommend an African-American person for facilitating the training. A unique strength of this program is that each session can stand alone and participation on a variety of schedules is possible.

THE EMPLOYED PARENT developed by Cornell University

"The Employed Parent" is a workshop series to help parents prepare for employment. The program is suitable for use in job-training programs, displaced homemaker groups, and with teenage and single parents. Skills developed include time management, expanding one's support network, evaluating child care options, and gaining family members' cooperation.

FAMILIES IN FOCUS developed by Cottage Program International

Families in Focus provides a prevention program for many of the problems faced by today's youth. Families who deal with problems in areas such as family communication, decision making and values, can reduce the risks of drug and alcohol abuse, teen pregnancy, suicide, and runaways.

Program Format: Families in Focus employs two methods of delivery; 1) in-home family meetings; and, 2) small, group workshops. Meetings are usually set two weeks apart and continue for approximately one year. The program addresses seven key areas of healthy family functioning. Through self-evaluation, families agree upon goals on which they wish to work. They are:

- I. Family Fun
- II. Family Decisions
- III. Family Pride
- IV. Family Values
- V. Family Feelings
- VI. Family Communication
- VII. Family Confidence

FAMILIES IN TOUCH by Joanne Barbara Koch

Families In Touch reasserts parents as the most important and influential persons in a child's life. Educating parents and encouraging open family communication are the first steps toward preventing substance abuse, premature sexual activity, and AIDS.

Program Format : Six, 50-page booklets. Booklets are targeted for specific age groups and are divided into two categories per group. One booklet is addressed to parents, with specific information for that child's age group, and the second booklet is activities for children and parents to do together. An instructor's guide and journals for self-expression are available. Categories and divisions:

- I. Getting in Touch With Your Child (ages 5-7)
- II. Getting To Know Me (ages 5-7)
- III. Growing Up (ages 8-10)
- IV. I'm Growing Up (ages 8-10)
- V. Staying in Touch (ages 11-15)
- VI. Older, But Not Old Enough (ages 11-15)
- VII. Instructor Guide
- VIII. Journals

Reviewer's Note: This material is widely used by school systems because it reinforces the idea of parent as educator. Self-esteem, sexuality, as well as drug and alcohol abuse prevention are covered. The program offers continuity throughout. The program demands that the parent read the material before sharing it with their children. The program is sequential and each booklet builds on the previous one.

FAMILY TIMES developed by 4-H Youth Development & Family Living Programs, University of Wisconsin-Extension

This activity book can be used as a self-study, but is more appropriate for "natural" groupings of families such as churches, service clubs, 4-H families, etc. It allows a family to take inventory of strengths and weaknesses, to decide together what the family wants to become, and to work toward those goals. Building and maintaining a family takes time and commitment. By working together, family members can learn to make decisions and show each other that they care. The activities teach a sense of pride and loyalty in the family and the community.

The primary goal of "Family Times" is to allow each family to find joy and strength in their own unique family.

GET INVOLVED BEFORE YOUR KIDS DO developed by Aid Association for Lutherans

This program, developed and promoted nationally by the Aid Association for Lutherans, uses a parent handbook and the video "Drug Free Kids." The video helps parents who suspect their child is using drugs or who are concerned about being prepared. Experts in drug and alcohol abuse offer sensible guidelines on how parents can confront dangerous behavior while maintaining open communication. A parent handbook supplements the video with activities and discussion questions that may be used in a two-session presentation.

Program Format: Workshop setting of maximum 20-25 parents. Program may be implemented in one or two sessions.

Reviewer's Notes: Excellent drama of teen peer pressure and use/abuse of crack/cocaine. Teen portrayal includes middle-class African-American and Caucasian teens. The purposes are discussion and promotion, increased awareness, and heightened individual understanding of the issue.

NURTURING PROGRAM by S.J. Bavolek, C. Comstock, & J.D. Bavolek

The Nurturing Programs help parents and children of all ages learn to communicate in a healthy, positive way. All family members are involved in activities that focus on building a positive regard for self and others.

Each of the five Nurturing Programs has been extensively evaluated. Pre-test and post-test data have been gathered to assess the program's effectiveness.

Program Format: The Nurturing Program may be used in either a home-based, or group-based format. The number of sessions varies according to the format selected. The five programs, with the group-based time commitment, are:

- I. Nurturing Program for Parents & Children Birth - Five Years
Twenty-three sessions, 2-1/2-hours each
- II. Nurturing Program for Parents & Children - 4-12 Years
Fifteen sessions, 2-1/2 hours each
- III. Nurturing Program for Parents & Adolescents
Twelve sessions, 3 hours each
- IV. Nurturing Program for Teenage Parents & Their Families
Forty sessions, 1-1/2 hours each
- V. Nurturing Program for Parents with Developmental Disabilities & Their Children
Fifteen sessions, 2 hours each

Target Group: Professionals and paraprofessionals working in mental health, social work, education, and parenting education.

Reviewer's Note: This program is designed to be used by anyone, with or without parent training. The program recognizes the importance of significant others in a child's life, as well as specifically single parents and stepparents. Pages can be torn out for use. The book is organized by childrens' developmental ages.

PARENT TO PARENT by Bill Oliver

Parent to Parent is a video-based workshop to help young people avoid drug problems by giving parents the knowledge, skills, attitudes, and abilities necessary to guide their children through the high risk years.

Program Format: Parent to Parent is designed to be taught in small groups, with group interaction. Through a trained local facilitator, this program can be tailored to the needs of a specific community. The three mini-workshops are presented in eight individual segments, of two hours each. Workshops included are:

- I. The Me Within - Presents basic information and concepts that structure the remainder of the program. Emphasizes the concept of parent-as-human and highlights strong concern for youth.
- II. P.A.R.E.N.T. - This acronym stands for "Put yourself in the way, Awareness is your best friend, Remember the difference, Expect and inspect, Never cry alone, Take time for yourself." These are the specific parenting skills emphasized in this prevention workshop.
- III. When All Else Fails - The intervention phase focuses on denial, provides a basis of self-diagnosis, and stresses the importance of quick action.

YOU'VE GOT TO BE KIDDING by Don Dinkmeyer & Stephen Glenn

This workshop is designed for parents and professionals and deals with raising children who are capable and confident.

Program Format: The eight segments of this series are:

- I. Life Ain't What It Used To Be! - This module sets the stage for the whole program by describing the changes of society over the last fifty years. Basic life skills for adult life are discussed.
- II. Paddle Your Own Canoe - Adolescents and adults must learn to "own" problems in order to learn responsibility.
- III. Communication And Dialog - The importance of open communication and its contribution to good relationships is discussed.
- IV. Goof And Grow - Decision making and learning from mistakes is the theme of this segment.
- V. The Kid Next Door - Explores the importance of self-esteem and the effect on behavior.
- VI. Encouragement - The use of encouragement is explored in this segment. How to use encouragement with children is demonstrated with realistic methods.
- VII. Playing The School Game - Helping adults to discover more appropriate teaching methods, this segment focuses on adolescent learning styles.
- VIII. Filling The Teen's Toolbox For Life - The ability to solve problems creatively is an important life skill. Brainstorming - a group problem-solving technique - is demonstrated in this session.

HOW TO SELECT PARENT EDUCATION PROGRAMS

How To Select Parent Education Programs

Mary McPhail Gray, Ph.D.
Extension Human Development State Specialist

Providing service to better your community takes a special kind of person. Whether you are a community leader, extension professional, educator, youth worker, or an interested volunteer, you all have one thing in common - you take risks to help your community grow.

Offering programs that are supportive and educational for parents is an important step toward community betterment.

This guide sheet will help you select the right programs for your community. There are many types of programs available that encourage parent involvement, education, and advocacy. Follow these guidelines when you are considering implementing a parent education program in your area.

I. Decisions To Consider As You Begin To Plan

A. Decision Point I

- Do you want parent involvement, parent education, or parent advocacy? Frequently confused, the three are each very different objectives.

B. Decision Point II

- Do you understand the difference between parent education and parent support?
- Do you need to be working with parents directly or with persons who are significant supports to parents? (i.e., ministers, school teachers, employers, etc.)

C. Decision Point III

- Who is your parent audience? (age, education, group affiliation, culture, age of children, objectives, etc.)
- Why would they want to be educated? (motivation)

D. Decision Point IV

- What are your parent education goals?
 - To give them information? (e.g., about child development, communicating, parenting stages, etc.)

- To change their beliefs/insights about themselves as parents?
- To learn new skills to put into practice?
- To learn to problem solve?

- What are your goals for parent involvement?
- What are your goals for parent advocacy?

E. Decision Point V

- Do you have a parent educator with these skills?
 1. Knowledge of the teaching/learning process (especially for behavior change).
 2. Knowledge of Human Development (both child and adult).
 3. Knowledge of family life/parenting literature.
 4. Knowledge of group process.
 5. Knowledge of local resources.
 6. Ethical understanding of parent educator's responsibility.

- Is a parent educator accessible for consultation?

F. Decision Point VI

- Is there a parenting curriculum or program within your budget that fulfills the basic objectives of your situation?

■ Is it also - (at a minimum)?

1. Consistent with research findings in human development and family life?
2. Free of recommendations that are psychologically or physically abusive?
3. Respectful of ethnic, cultural and life-style differences?

II. "Danger" Signals in Packaged Parent Education Programs

- A. Belittling of parent problems or practices.
- B. Cultural/social class differences from your intended audience.
- C. Prescriptive recommendations (e.g., "Do this -" with no rationale or explanation of how to individualize).
- D. Simplistic reliance on one response for one behavior.
- E. Recommendation of potentially harmful processes (e.g. - time out) without adequate information about safe guards or judgment.
- F. Overload of child developmental information with no specifics for parent behavior.
- G. Sexist language and/or recommendations.

H. Implied "ideal" of family structure or functioning (e.g. - 2 parents - father knows best).

I. Unrealistic portrayal of problems or solutions (especially in reference to your group).

III. Basic Assumptions

- A. Many parents need support and education. With so many parents, some education will inevitably be done by parent leaders with professional support.
- B. There are many poor quality parent education materials and there are many more examples of the wrong materials for a specific audience.
- C. A skilled parent educator rarely uses a whole "packaged program" - but knows how to select appropriate pieces for a particular audience.

IV. Resources/Skills Needed by a Parent Leader

- A. Professional parent educator with whom to plan for a parent education group.
- B. Assistance in appropriate adaptation of a "canned program."
- C. Assessment of the needs of the parent group.
- D. Knowledge of local referral sources.

- E. Knowledge of group dynamics in order to act to:
1. Protect a person who is receiving negative feedback from the group.
 2. Keep a person from dominating the discussion.
 3. Keep the group away from group therapy and focused on parent education.
 4. Keep a positive, safe environment alive for all members.

6. Identify how they will find the strength and resources to change and use this new behavior.

As you look over these outcomes, does your plan include all of them?

V. Identifiable Outcomes for A Successful Parent Education Experience

For parent education to be excellent, it must help a parent:

1. Recognize the patterns he or she learned and is now using to parent.
2. Recognize the unique characteristics (including strengths) of their child/children.
3. Learn as much as is necessary or desirable about normal development at their child's age and their parenting stage.
4. Learn one useful framework or model for positive parenting.
5. Learn one useful behavior to try with their child.
